

Stepping Into a Role She Was Destined to Serve

City Manager Jeanna Troha Has Spent Most of Her Life In or Near Local Government

Growing up in the Pacific Northwest as the daughter of a city manager, Jeanna Troha has had a front row seat to observe the challenges and rewards of working in municipal government for most of her life.

“My dad would come home late from a city council meeting, I’d ask him about what happened at the meeting, and we’d engage in a really great conversation about local issues,” remembers Troha. “It allowed me to see the opportunities to do good in a community.”

As Wilsonville’s new city manager, effective in April, Troha is now following in her father’s footsteps. She was appointed by the City Council in February following a nationwide recruitment to find a successor to long-time City Manager Bryan Cosgrove.

Committed to Service

Troha’s intention to work in local government was solidified while at Washington State University, when she switched her major from broadcast journalism to political science.

“In journalism, you’re chasing the story. When you work in local government, you get to see day in and day out how you can make somebody’s life better, even on a small scale,” Troha said.

After completing her bachelor’s degree, Troha earned a master’s in public administration at the University of Kansas, a small, selective program that she sought out for its focus on municipal management.

She began her career with an internship in Olathe (Kans.), and job opportunities with the cities of Rockville (Md.) and New Brighton (Minn.), before returning to the Northwest in 2007 to become Wilsonville’s assistant city manager and human resources director.

Dump Bulky Waste on May 16

The City’s popular Bulky Waste Day takes place on Saturday, May 16, 9 am-1 pm, at Republic Services (10295 SW Ridder Rd.) in Wilsonville.

Bulky Waste Day is held twice each year for Wilsonville residents to dispose of large or unusual items that cannot be picked up curbside. Proof of Wilsonville residence is required to participate.

There is no charge to dispose of bulky waste. Instead, the City asks participants to donate (cash, check or Venmo) to Wilsonville Community Sharing, which provides critical social services assistance to local families in need. Donations are collected on site.

Upon arrival, vehicles are weighed and guided to disposal bays. Participants should only bring items that can be moved without staff assistance.

Bulky Waste Day accepts many items otherwise hard to dispose of, including dishwashers, televisions, refrigerators, computers, monitors, stoves, dryers, water heaters, couches, mattresses, scrap metal, tables and chairs, and clean, untreated wood. All fuel must be emptied from lawn-mowers and other gas-powered equipment.

During her 19 years at Wilsonville City Hall, nobody has worn as many hats. Troha’s tenure has included brief stints as interim city manager, interim transit director, and interim parks and recreation director (twice). For the last year, she served as the City’s interim community development director — overseeing planning, engineering, building, economic development and natural resources functions.

Upon ratifying her appointment, Wilsonville Mayor Shawn O’Neil said it was more than just Troha’s vast experience that made her the Council’s unanimous choice to serve as the City’s chief executive.

“What mattered most was trust,” O’Neil said. “Those who work with her describe a leader who listens first, stays calm under pressure, and communicates clearly with both the Council and the public.”

“I have seen that myself as Mayor. During critical moments in our community, she has been someone I could rely on.”

A Short Commute to Work

Troha’s knowledge of Wilsonville is honed by more than just her 19 years working in City Hall. She and her husband Kris, a high school teacher, have made

Rotary Providing Bulky Waste Pickup

The City is partnering with the Rotary Club of Wilsonville to provide pickup of bulky waste items for a limited number older adults and other Wilsonville residents unable to transport waste to Republic Services. This service, limited to 25-30 requests, is provided on first-come, first-served basis for residents who would otherwise be unable to participate. To request service, visit bit.ly/BW_pickup

Mayor’s Message

New City Manager Has Spent Two Decades Earning Our Trust

One underrated contributor to Wilsonville’s long-term stability and success is continuity in leadership at the highest level of city government.

Until last month, only two individuals had served as Wilsonville’s City Manager since 1991. Arlene Loble held the position from 1991 to 2011. Her successor, Bryan Cosgrove, retired in March after 15 years of service.

Their steady, professional leadership set a high bar. Wilsonville residents and businesses have come to expect something important from their local government — that it works. That it responds. That it is thoughtful and measured, not only when times are easy, but when times are difficult.

In selecting a new City Manager, the City Council’s responsibility was not simply to find someone who could do the job. The question was who was ready on day one to guide this community forward and maintain that high standard of excellence.

After a thorough recruitment process, informed by input from residents across the community, it became clear that the right person was already serving Wilsonville. The City Council was proud to unanimously appoint Jeanna Troha as our next City Manager.

Jeanna has spent nearly two decades serving the people of Wilsonville. Since 2007 she has served as Assistant City Manager while also calling Wilsonville home.

Much of her work has taken place behind the scenes — supporting staff, supporting the City Manager, and helping ensure this organization succeeds. She has overseen multiple departments,

Those who work with Jeanna describe a leader who listens first, stays calm under pressure, and communicates clearly.

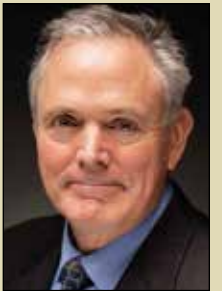

Those who work with Jeanna describe a leader who listens first, stays calm under pressure, and communicates clearly. I have seen that firsthand as Mayor. During critical moments for our city, she has been someone I could rely on. When she traveled with me to Washington, D.C., she was prepared, thoughtful, and focused on delivering results for our residents.

Jeanna puts the best interests of Wilsonville first. She understands our city not only from an administrative perspective, but personally. She lives here, raised her children here, and has invested nearly two decades of service to this community.

Jeanna steps into the role of City Manager with deep knowledge of Wilsonville and the leadership and judgment needed to carry out the direction set by this Council.

Local government is where residents experience government most directly — when they need safe streets, reliable services, or help with a neighborhood concern. The City Manager’s responsibility is to ensure those services work for the people we Wilsonville home since moving to Oregon. Their sons, Carter and Clayton, are both Wilsonville High School graduates.

Living in the city that she serves is an intentional choice.

“It’s what I’ve done my entire career,” Troha said. “I want to know what it is like as a resident to experience the services that we provide. I’m driving streets that the employee team constructs, I’m enjoying the parks and trails, attending school events, and shopping at local businesses. I have neighbors and friends who have experiences within the community and want to share their thoughts and ideas with me. There are a lot of benefits.”

An avid runner, Troha has also employed a unique method over the years to become even more familiar with the community she serves.

“I always walk or run every new road and every new park we have built,” she said. “There’s nothing better than to see people enjoy something I know our employee team worked hard to provide.”

Her predecessor as city manager believes nobody is better suited to take lead Wilsonville.

“She’s lived here and worked here for nearly 20 years, so her learning curve is very small,” Cosgrove said. “She brings a knowledge of the people, the issues, the challenges and opportunities better than anyone.”

Establishing Early Priorities

One of Troha’s first decisions was to name interim appointees as assistant city manager and community development director. She also is eager to spend time with each City Councilor to gain a more thorough understanding of their priorities so that City staff can help guide their vision for the community.

“I’ll ask questions and seek to understand so that I can provide a path forward,” she said.

Learning by listening is her nature, and it is a successful, well-honed approach that she intends to take with employees, residents, and other community stakeholders.

“I’m very customer service oriented, both internally with employees, and with external stakeholders,” Troha said. “Providing a very high level of service to our community is my expectation of myself and of the employee team.”

Troha’s extensive knowledge of Wilsonville, her demeanor, and her leadership style foretell an easy transition, both for herself and for the city she serves.

“She doesn’t bring a lot of ego to the table, so she’s going to be good at seeking a lot of input from people before she makes important decisions,” Cosgrove said.

Wildfire Awareness: Creating a Defensible Space

After an unusually mild winter—one of the warmest on record—snowpack levels are extremely low. Many officials predict that these warmer, drier conditions will increase the likelihood of earlier, more intense wildfires this year.

With that elevated risk, it’s more important than ever to take steps now to prepare your property. May is National Wildfire Awareness Month, a perfect time to get started.

One of the most effective steps homeowners can take is to create “defensible space”—a buffer between your home or outbuildings and the surrounding grass, trees, shrubs, or wildland. Studies show that well-maintained defensible space can significantly improve a structure’s chances of surviving a wildfire.

The Oregon State Fire Marshal (OSFM) suggests the following steps to build your defensible space.

- Clear leaves, pine needles, and debris from your roof, gutters, and under decks where embers can easily catch fire.
- Trim plants and bushes beneath eaves, and space trees and shrubs so fire cannot easily spread.
- Remove dead or flammable vegetation and mulch near your home. Consider replacing it with gravel or decorative rock.

- Dispose of yard debris by chipping, composting, or recycling—never burning. Also repair siding or skirting to ensure it is in good condition.

- Install metal mesh over attic and soffit vents and under decks to help keep embers out of hidden areas.
- Regularly mow or weed-whack vegetation around structures, fences, vehicles, roadways, and under power lines. OSFM recommends keeping grass and weeds under four inches to reduce the risk of grass fire.

Don’t overlook everyday items around your property that could easily catch fire. Embers can travel a long way, igniting firewood piles, stored lumber, or even patio furniture. To improve safety, store wood and BBQ propane tanks at least 30 feet from your home and keep flammable cushions or furniture indoors when not in use.

Preparing for wildfire doesn’t have to be difficult and can be the key to protecting your property this season. For more information and other emergency preparedness resources, visit wilsonvilleready.com.

May Election Includes Local Ballot Measure

Oregon's 2026 primary election takes place on May 19. Registered Wilsonville voters are asked to consider Measure 3-632, which asks "Should the Wilsonville Charter be amended to require voter notification and approval to create or substantially change Urban Renewal Plans?"

A YES vote would amend the City Charter to make voter approval a requirement before the City adopts any new Urban Renewal Plan or makes certain types of changes to an existing plan. A NO vote would leave the City Charter unchanged, allowing the City to seek voter input through a non-binding advisory vote.

Wilsonville has used urban renewal — also called Tax Increment Financing (TIF) — for several decades to fund new infrastructure in blighted areas. Historically, the Wilsonville City Council has sought an advisory vote of the electorate before establishing a new urban renewal district and has honored the outcome of such votes.

Urban renewal is a financial tool used by local governments to cure blight. It reallocates a portion of collected tax revenues from taxing agencies — City, counties, and other special districts such as the Fire District — for investment in public projects within the defined district to facilitate private investment and development.

Ballots must be dropped at an official drop box by 8 pm on Tuesday, May 19, or postmarked no later than that date. The City's drive-thru drop box is located at City Hall, near the main entrance.

Residents seeking additional information to inform their vote on Measure 3-632 may find the text of Measure 3-632 at bit.ly/measure3-632 or review the Clackamas County Voters' Pamphlet, which has been mailed to registered voters and is also available online at clackamas.us/elections

City Welcomes New Parks & Recreation Director

Megan Big John has joined the City’s leadership team as the new Director of Parks and Recreation.

With more than 20 years of relevant experience in the public sector, Big John oversees the City’s expansive network of parks and open spaces, as well as the City’s recreational programs, camps and community events. She leads a dedicated team of parks and recreation professionals committed to providing recreational opportunities for Wilsonville residents of all ages and backgrounds.

Megan Big John

“Megan’s diverse background and collaborative spirit make her a perfect fit for this community. She is passionate about creating experiences that bring people joy through parks and recreation,” City Manager Jeanna Troha said.

Most recently, Big John served as Parks and Recreation Director for the City of West Linn. Prior to that, she spent 14 years with the City of Lake Oswego (2009-23), where she began in park maintenance before ascending to Parks Manager. In that capacity, she oversaw park maintenance, habitat improvement, staffing, and long-range planning while contributing to capital park development projects.

Big John holds a bachelor’s degree in Horticulture from Oregon State University. She is actively involved in the Oregon Recreation and Parks Association, currently serving as its president after having served as Director at Large (2020-24) and President of the Maintenance and Construction Section (2016-20).

“I am honored to join the Wilsonville Parks and Recreation team,” Big John said. “Parks and Recreation play such an important role in creating spaces and opportunities for people to come together, stay active and feel connected to their community. I’m excited to be a part of the team who brings those services to Wilsonville.”

Two Named to Interim Executive Roles

Following Troha’s transition to City Manager in April, she announced two interim staffing assignments to provide additional leadership team support for City staff.

Steve Rymer, who joined the City in November as interim Parks and Recreation Director, is serving as interim Assistant City Manager. Public Works Director Delora Kerber is serving as interim Community Development Director, a position Troha held for the past year before moving into her current role.

POLICE CHIEF'S CORNER

Curious About Crime Stats? Local Data is Available to Community Members

One of the most common inquiries we receive at the Wilsonville Police Department is about crime data and police activity in our community.

Community members want to know what is happening in their neighborhoods, how often officers are responding to calls, and what types of crimes are being reported. Transparency and access to information are essential in building trust, and I want to make sure our community knows that this information is readily available to anyone who wishes to review it.

Police Chief
Jed Wilson

The Clackamas County Sheriff's Office, which provides police services to the City of Wilsonville, maintains a comprehensive and user-friendly website: clackcosheriff.us/

At this site, anyone can view detailed dashboards that display both call activity and reported crime data for Wilsonville and elsewhere within Clackamas County. The site's interactive tools allow users to explore trends, view maps of reported incidents, and better understand the types of calls deputies respond to on a daily basis.

Data is updated regularly, ensuring the information you are seeing reflects current activity in our community. A link to this site is also available on the City of Wilsonville's website, wilsonvilleoregon.gov/police

For those who prefer accessing their information from a mobile device, the Sheriff's Office also offers the ClackCo Sheriff mobile app, available for free on both the Apple App Store and Google Play. The app provides many of the same features as the website, including access to crime data, news, and public safety updates. It also allows users to submit tips, file certain non-emergency reports, and stay connected with the Sheriff's Office wherever they are.

In addition to viewing data, residents can use online tools and the mobile app to make eligible crime reports, request records, and learn more about the services provided by the Sheriff's Office. These tools are designed to make it easier and more convenient for the public to interact with law enforcement even when it is unnecessary to make a phone call or visit an office in person.

We understand that people are increasingly interested in data-driven information about their local government and public safety services. By making this information publicly available, we aim to provide transparency, promote informed conversations, and encourage community engagement.

Whether you are researching crime trends, checking recent call activity, or simply learning more about how your police services operate, these resources are available to you at any time.

I encourage all Wilsonville residents to take a few minutes to explore the Sheriff's Office website or download the mobile app. Staying informed is one of the best ways to stay connected to your community and to better understand the work being done each day to keep Wilsonville a safe place to live, work, and visit.

Capital needs at the Wastewater Treatment Plant necessitated the adoption of new sewer utility fees.

Learn More About the Recent Adjustment to Utility Bill Fees

In recent months, the Wilsonville City Council has adopted an increase in both sewer and stormwater utility fees paid by all customers. These increases are to fund necessary capital improvements to maintain these critical systems.

The increase to stormwater fees took effect on the April bill. The increase in sewer fees will be reflected on the May bill.

For residential customers, sewer charges are calculated using a winter average, as this best represents the amount of water entering the sewer system. This average is based on water usage from November through March and is recalculated each April. This means the updated average and the rate adjustment are appearing at the same time.

Amid Proposed Code Updates, City Seeks Public Input to Inform Development Review Processes

Throughout May and June, the City is inviting residents to visit "Let's Talk, Wilsonville!" to provide input to Planning staff that informs how the City notifies the public about proposed new development in Wilsonville.

Recent changes in State law are limiting the scope of public hearing notices, but these mailers are not the only way the City provides notice about development projects.

The City also provides notification by:

- Listing active development projects on the City website
- Posting notices at City Hall, the Community Center, and the Library
- Posting a notice of public hearing at the project site
- Publishing notice of public hearings in the The Review (previously Wilsonville Spokesman)
- E-mailing public hearing notices to mailing list subscribers (signup at

A short survey at LetsTalkWilsonville.com is asking community members to indicate which notification methods work best to keep the public informed. Responses will guide future public notification efforts regarding new development.

Find the survey at bit.ly/4t9ipvS.

At the May meeting of the Planning Commission, the City is holding a public hearing on the Housing Statutory Compliance Project, which proposes changes to local development code that aligns City code with Oregon statutory requirements and advances the City's Housing Production Strategy with updates to the City's land use review process for residential development.

This meeting takes place on Wednesday, May 13, at 6 pm at City Hall. Visit wilsonvilleoregon.gov/bc-pc for more information about attending and/or how to provide public comment on the project.

The Housing Statutory Compliance Project is scheduled to be considered by the City Council for adoption on June 1.

Engagement 101: Tips to Stay Aware, Involved

Local government can only consider the needs of those who engage and provide direct feedback. When that input doesn't represent the interests of the broader community, a city's work is less effective.

Wilsonville's staff and elected officials do their best work to serve the community when a large cross-section of residents are informed, engaged and offering input on City policies, projects, and programs.

City Advocacy Preserves Funding for Boone Bridge Replacement Studies

During the 2026 Oregon legislative session, the City of Wilsonville successfully advocated to preserve $1 million in funding for preliminary studies to inform the Boone Bridge Replacement Project.

The Boone Bridge Replacement Project and its associated congestion, safety, and seismic improvements remain a top priority for the City at both the state and federal level. A new bridge would provide safer, more efficient transportation, both locally and regionally, for the benefit of Wilsonville's residents and business operators.

At a March City Council meeting, Mayor Shawn O'Neil expressed his gratitude to the 28 Wilsonville residents who submitted testimony in support of keeping the allocated funds whole when it became evident that funding could be reduced.

The City has partnered with Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) to formally request an additional $4 million in federal funding to continue the preliminary work to inform the project. Several local businesses and government partners provided support for the federal request. The local coalition of emphatic supporters illustrates the project's significance to improve local congestion, interstate commerce, and roadway safety.

Preliminary work required to advance the Boone Bridge Replacement Project includes a geotechnical investigation, site condition analysis, an Endangered Species Act and biological survey, a wetlands and waters analysis, archaeological and historical resources studies, and a noise and visual impacts evaluation.

The City will continue to build its partnership with ODOT, community stakeholders, and legislators from the state and federal government to move this critical project forward.

Notable Actions: City Boards and Commissions

City Council	Action	What it Means
Apr. 6	The City Council adopted an abatement program aimed at curtailing graffiti vandalism in Wilsonville.	The program includes three elements: cash incentives for tips that lead to apprehension of vandals, a reimbursement program to mitigate the cost of clean-up and repairs, and a 'graffiti removal loaner kit' program to assist residents and volunteer groups in the removal of graffiti on private property.
Apr. 6	The Council authorized a $597,000 contract with Trojan Technologies for the procurement of ultraviolet disinfection equipment for the Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP).	This equipment will provide system redundancy and capacity expansion for disinfection process at the WWTP to meet applicable discharge permit requirements for treatment of existing and future wastewater flows.
Apr. 6	To fund pedestrian enhancements on three City roadways, the Council approved a $380,000 contract with Turney Excavating, Inc.	Improvements include a mid-block pedestrian crossing on 95th Avenue, north of Freeman Dr., that features a landscaped pedestrian median island, crosswalk striping, and push-activated flashing beacons.
Apr. 6	The Council approved the City's acquisition of property owned by a homeowners' association to advance the Boeckman Creek Flow Mitigation Project.	The project is restoring natural drainage patterns in the Coffee Lake and Boeckman Creek drainage basins and improving local fish habitat.
Apr. 6	The Council authorized the City to execute easements within property jointly owned by the City and the Tualatin Valley Water District.	This documents the locations of a water intake pipeline, certain ground improvements (particularly seismic infrastructure), and a pump station to be operated by the inter-governmental Willamette Intake Facilities Commission.
Mar. 16	The City Council adopted the first increase in sewer utility fees since 2014 to address critical capital improvements at the City's Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP).	The Council's action ensures funding to operate, maintain, and improve the City's wastewater system while being responsive to public concerns about cost increases.
Mar. 16	Additionally, the Council adopted amendments to its building and fire codes to ensure that Wilsonville's regulations remain aligned with current State code.	This action ensures that local structures meet established State safety standards and that Wilsonville code is consistent with that in neighboring jurisdictions.

Safely Enjoy Spending Summer in the Water

Swimming works your entire body, enhances your cardiovascular conditioning, builds muscle strength and endurance, and improves your posture and flexibility. It’s a low-impact exercise that protects your joints from stress and strain, making it enjoyable at any age.

Tualatin Valley Fire & Rescue encourages parents to ensure their children learn this life skill and know how to stay safe in and around water.

This summer, as people head to area pools and local waterways to cool off and enjoy the outdoors, plan ahead for possible risks, learn about water safety, and know how to respond to a water emergency.

A drowning or near-drowning can happen in a matter of seconds. It typically occurs when a child is left unattended or during a brief lapse in supervision. Drowning is often silent — there can be very little splashing, waving, or swimming to alert parents and bystanders to a swimmer in distress.

Make water safety a priority by following these tips:

- Always supervise children and give them your undivided attention. Keep young kids within arm’s reach of an adult and make sure older children swim with a partner.

- Use the buddy system — even adults should never swim alone, especially in open water such as lakes, rivers, and streams.
- Know your limits, and keep an eye on weaker swimmers.
- Take frequent breaks if you are feeling too tired, too cold, too far from safety, exposed to too much sun, or experience too much strenuous activity.
- Don’t dive in shallow water or unfamiliar areas. The American Red Cross recommends 9 feet as a minimum depth for diving.
- Young children should always wear a U.S. Coast Guard-approved life jacket in or around open water. Weak or non-swimmers should also wear a life jacket in pools.
- Water wings” can give parents and kids a false sense of security. These air-filled aids are toys that are not designed to substitute for life jackets or life preservers.
- Life jackets are required for everyone on a boat or paddlecraft (canoe, kayak, stand-up paddle board, etc.); and must be worn by children 12 and younger.

- Avoid alcohol and drugs when swimming.
- Have a charged cellphone nearby in the event of an emergency.
- Learn CPR and basic water rescue skills.

Anyone swimming outdoors in open water needs to be aware of uneven surfaces, river currents, ocean undertow, and changing weather. Swimming in a natural body of water is different than a pool. More skills and energy are needed, along with an eye for potential hazards.

Annual Backflow Assembly Tests Required By June 30

Most water customers who own backflow assemblies must have an annual required test completed before June 30.

Maintaining and testing backflow assemblies protects homeowners and the broader community from potential water contamination.

Residents are sent a reminder notice that details how to schedule a test and explains the importance of administering the program in accordance with State law and the City Code (Chapter 3.1).

A yellow box on the reminder notice highlights the testing deadline and other important details.

The City’s online system allows certified assembly testers to enter inspection results into the City’s backflow database using a unique TRAC # located on the notice. The TRAC # gives testers information about the assembly(ies) at your location, such as make, model, and serial number, but does not identify individuals or provide contact information at the associated address.

A link to certified testers is included on the reminder notice. When scheduling a test, provide your TRAC # (unchanged from last year) and advise your tester that the City only accepts electronic test reports through the EcosConnect system. Paper reports are not accepted. After results are submitted, customers are provided a copy of results from tester.

Backflow prevention assemblies are installed to prevent backflow of contaminants into drinking water. Administering this program ensures high-quality drinking water for our community. To learn more, visit wilsonvilleoregon.gov/backflow

Flushing of Water Mains Continues

Public Works utility crews are continuing the annual flushing of the City’s water mains, scouring out mineral deposits to ensure optimal water quality and to maintain the City’s infrastructure by exercising hydrants, valves and blow-off assemblies and verifying their operability.

Water flushed from fire hydrants often appears to be orange or rust-colored. The discoloration is caused by iron deposits. It has been fully disinfected and poses no health threat if consumed.

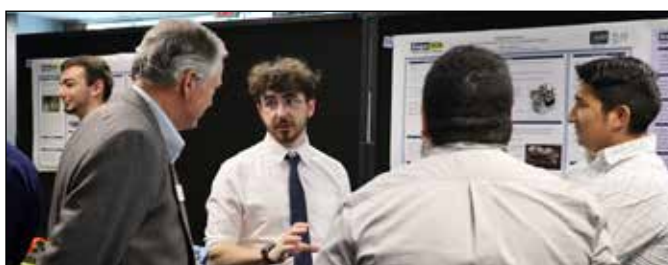

After flushing occurs in your neighborhood, it is recommended that you wait 20-30 minutes or more to run water to greatly reduce the chance of pulling discolored water into your home plumbing system.

Questions? Please call the Public Works Department at 503-682-4092.
